The College Community

DECEMBER 1959

With 7717 students darting through his private domain, this campus squirrel not only has become accustomed to human companionship on the college green, he has turned into a downright brazen ham. He and his furry-tailed friends seem to enjoy the attention they get in front of Cutler Hall every day.

Are Today's Students Different?

Here is the way the modern college student compares with his father when he was a student, as told by a popular OU professor who has observed both.

By Ralph F. Beckert

PROFESSOR OF ACCOUNTING

OHIO UNIVERSITY was set for an important football game and campus feeling was intense. Gathering at Beckley's corner, students formed a snake dance and began a parade up Court Street. To add spice, they wound through the theater, disrupting the show. Then they went into a restaurant, grabbed some doughnuts and threw them to the crowd.

This might well be fuel for the fire raging about today's American students losing respect for the real meaning of education. I read such interpretations nearly every week.

The only thing is, the incident I have just recounted happened in 1929. Or was it 1919? I'm not certain, but it was somewhere in that era.

The point is, it could have been 1939, 1949, or, yes, 1959. Students may be different in many ways today, but basically they are the same as I remember them over the past 40 years. And it disturbs me no end to read that "this generation" seems to have forgotten the real meaning of higher education.

Certainly, there are many students who want to follow the line of least resistance. But this has always been true. We have problem students now. We had them in 1919, and I expect they had a few in 1819. As long as you deal with human beings, you must expect the good, the bad and the indifferent.

Journalists Emphasize Evils

It seems to me that the biggest difference is not in the students so much as in our attitudes toward them. It has been the tendency of present day journalism to emphasize the evils and the wrong doings, never playing up the vast majority. We take exceptions and magnify them out of all proportion.

Then we shake our heads in despair over the things we read about today's irresponsible students.

Take the subject of cheating. Last spring we had a flare up of cheating on examinations and received a lot of publicity for it. It can not be excused. I want to make that point clear. But I can remember 40 years ago when examination questions were placed in rubber balls and tossed out the window to friends coming in for the next class. Then there were the scrolls made out of pencils. And the huge shirt cuffs of the day often resembled pages from a dictionary during exam week.

I personally think that cheating is downright foolish. But I'm not 19 anymore.

And while we are on the subject of cheating, let me say that we professors must come in for our share of the blame. If we use the same examinations year after year, we can expect cheating. And if we leave an exam lying around, the devil is going to tap some student on the shoulder and point it out to him. As elders, we should know better.

But I digress. We read about drinking. It should not be permitted to get out of hand. But again, is it a symbol of today's student? Absolutely not.

How many readers will remember the days of Prohibition when students bought "Straitsville Hooch" and bathtub gin. Some of it contained fusel oil. Most students who drank it—and there were plenty—got sick. It is a wonder they didn't go blind.

We read about today's panty raids. They are not to be condoned, by any means. But they are mild when compared with the Freshman Frolics of the '20's, when the object seemed to be to see how rowdy one could get. And there was the time someone tied a cow on the porch of Lindley Hall so that it could bawl all night and scare the coeds half to death.

These are the things that we oldsters laugh about when we get together and reminisce. Then we go back home and tsk tsk about teen-age problems of today.

Lest it be thought that I am condoning or excusing foolish pranks, however, I return to a statement I made earlier. Today's student is different in many ways. This difference has nothing to do with goodness or badness. It would be more startling to me if the student were not different, when you consider how much different our entire society is.

For instance, 40 years ago we thought a coed who smoked was teetering on the brink of lewdness. The girls in Lindley had to sneak up on the roof for a cigarette. Remember?

Today there are smoking rooms in the girls dormitories.

Likewise, in the classroom the student has changed. When I was a student the professor was more apart and aloof from the class. We were expected to accept the words of the "oracle" without question.

Now the student questions his professor. And he wants proof, not dogmatic statements.

I interpret this as progress. The student is more honest in many ways. He wants more information and is not afraid to stand up and say that he doesn't understand something.

This has been a gradual change. Today, we as teachers have more contact with out students, despite large classes. We encourage them to ask questions. We want them to understand a subject, not just take our word for it. We don't have ex cathedra teaching to the extent we had it three decades ago.

Time Should Bring Improvement

Does this mean I am now degrading education as it appeared when I was a student at Ohio University? Certainly not. We should improve with time. I'm sure similar improvements will be made in the decades ahead.

The point I am making is that we all have a tendency to look back on the "good old days" and forget that there also were some "bad old days."

We often read that there is more emphasis in college today on the social life. This is true. There is.

But doesn't this emphasis permeate our entire social structure? We have more leisure. We have radio, television, automobiles, motion pictures, city arenas. But why go on. No one needs proof of America's increased social consciousness.

It would be illogical to pluck a student from such a society and place him for four years in a different atmosphere. So there is more social life on today's campus.

Frankly, I don't believe the social emphasis has reached the proportion on the campus that it has away from the campus. Many a contract is signed on the golf course, I am told. But we don't include golf as a basic requirement in our business curriculum yet.

Students Are Becoming More Worldly

Education is no longer merely a preparation for life. It is life itself.

Students come to us with a much broader education. It is not at all uncommon for students to have travelled to other countries. Most of them have been in many parts of the United States.

As to their respect for right and wrong, I can attest to the fact that they mete out much more severe penalties to each other than they get from the faculty and administration.

But we do have problems. There are some students who put fraternities, sororities, athletics and social life above studies. It is regrettable. It was regrettable in 1919. It probably will be regrettable in 1989.

This leads to the one problem that is a sign of our times. The problem of numbers.

By sheer numbers alone, problems with students will increase. We will get more problem students just as we will get more top students, more average students, more men and more women.

This is the result of not only an increase in population but an increase in social pressures connected with attending college. There are more young people today—even percentage wise—competing for the top positions, many of which require college educations.

They can't all be chiefs. Some have to be Indians. Yet, who are we to stifle honest ambition? We are still morally obligated to provide equal opportunity for deserving students.

Let's Recognize Some Facts

This competition, though, will continue to put more responsibility on the shoulders of our students. It is not just enough that they be as good today as they were yesterday. They have to be better.

Let's recognize that fact. Let's help them appreciate the responsibility they have. Let's realize that they want help, not just criticism in their problems. When we take time to reason with our young people, we find they are very reasonable.

I had confidence in our students 30 years ago. I have confidence in them today. And I think it is important that we let them know we have that confidence.

Above all, let us not expect them to do exactly what we want them to do in the manner we would have done it in our day.

To use an old cliché, you can't put an old head on young shoulders. Need I say more?

The College Community

HOW DO we prepare a person to be a good citizen of his country and the world? How do you produce a good, honest statesman or a dynamic educator or an engineer with a well-rounded personality or an artist with the ability to understand people?

Somewhere in the fine or not so fine print of any American university's constitution is a statement about the obligations of a university to provide the best possible facilities for academic and non-academic growth of the students.

Frequently when a student comes to college, he does not know exactly where he is going or where he has been. In many cases the freshman hasn't thought deeply about his goals in life. The university offers an ideal laboratory for this type of person to get to know himself, to improve himself, to challenge himself and to formulate a philosophy of life for himself.

It is the basic purpose of an institution of higher learning to provide for academic development of its students. The classroom experience and the contact with learned men are privileges which give the college graduate an intellectual boost.

So far we have only discussed the university's responsibilities, however, this is only one part of the contract a student makes when he joins an institution of higher learning. The student has various responsibilities and obligations to his school. He is expected to develop academically and he must oblige by attaining certain scholastic marks.

There are rules and laws in a college community which must be obeyed, just as there are state and national regulations to follow. Probably the sternest rule in the college community relates to the academic responsibility. If a student for one reason or another does not make the grade, he doesn't remain in the college community.

The other obligations a student has are of the non-academic nature. There are no rules set up by the university saying that each student must participate in at least two extracurricular activities; however, to become a complete person or a good citizen, it is necessary that a student take advantage of the opportunity to develop academically, socially, emotionally, physically and culturally.

THE benefits of living in a dormitory are great. There are ample opportunities to develop leadership abilities, but all of this can only be accomplished under a well-devised system of management. In the men's residence halls all the heads of the residence halls and their assistants meet with the Dean of Men and Assistant Dean in Charge of Residence Halls to discuss problems and gather information to take to the men in the dorms. They go back to their dormitories and meet with their counselors who directly present the given information to the students. A similar situation operates in the girls dormitories. Not only does this system provide an efficient way of keeping all the students informed, but it also gives many students the opportunity to exert leadership abilities and get practical experience in human relations.

NOT ALL is grand and glorious for the student or the counselor. When a student violates one of the rules of the society (namely, the dormitory unit of which he is a member) he must be reprimanded and in some cases face severe discipline. Each dormitory sets up a court or similar body to handle the "offenders." In other words, the student is given a chance to give his side of the story and then be judged by his fellow citizens. When the offense is of the serious nature, the head of the dormitory may act on the decision or refer the case to the Dean of Men or Dean of Women for further action.

TO THE present students and recent graduates, "Hog Island" is just a term. But to many alumni the above picture holds many memories. From the 700 capacity of the barracks in the post W.W. II period, Ohio U. now accommodates approximately 2800 in the East Green development. In addition to the brick walks instead of the catwalks and the paved streets instead of gravel, there is an aesthetic quality about the lower campus. These beautiful buildings provide fine living situations in which young people can mature. Students living in this area now eat in cafeterias in Jefferson Hall and Shively Hall. Each cafeteria has two counter serving areas, conveyor belts to take trays to the dish room and are decorated in gay pleasing colors.

Sixty per cent of the 7717 enrollment is housed in the 18 dormitories, while 10 per cent live in fraternity or sorority houses and 23.5 per cent live in outside housing or commute. Two per cent of the married student enrollment is housed in university houses or barracks or trailer parks.

THERE ARE many happy moments shared with the roommates or friends down the hall. These same close acquaintances are also your "buddies" when you receive a not-to-good test score, or a "Dear John" letter, or when you hit a low ebb in your general outlook on life. As a freshman you are assigned to a room, a triple room. In most cases you do not know your roommate before he or she has taken the lower bunk, the best side of the closet and the most convenient drawers in the bureau. This is the first time most students have lived with individuals other than family unless they have been in the service, and there are adjustments from the onset.

STUDENTS are exposed to the finer things of life on the college campus, or at least the availability of culture is there for them with which to grow. Concerts, symphonies, art exhibits and plays are scheduled throughout the year so the student can absorb culture outside of the classroom.

WHEN you see a student off by himself, just sitting, you don't know whether he has just failed a test, gotten a bad-news letter from home or is trying to figure out how to make his weekly allowance stretch for another week. The college student's life isn't so sheltered and idealistic as people often say. Students meet real problems and learn to solve them, others are faced with crises and become stronger individuals because of it. About 55 per cent of the college population is of "college age"—that being from 18 to 21, and there is a great deal of maturing to take place in those years. Sometimes he must be alone in the quiet to get to know himself better.

WHEN the statistics say "the odds are 3 to 1 against anyone in the lower third of his high school graduating class making it," it makes a few people sit up and take notice. Perhaps that first year at college you have to hit the books with an extra wallop, because in spite of all the fun you realize that to stick around and enjoy a college career, you must produce. Few students get by with less than two hours a day, and as a rule the higher the point average the more time the student spends with the books.

A very natural way to mature intellectually and socially is with the daily contact of well-educated people on a college campus. Most professors and administrative officials feel that the out-of-the-classroom learning is comparable to the lectures given within four walls. For this reason, it is not unusual to see professors speaking at meetings in the dormitories or fraternity or sorority houses or advising student organizations. The main thing is that there is an exchange of ideas; the educators learn more about their students in respect to abilities and objectives, and the students see how personable their teachers can be.

ONE of the representatives to the council presents a suggestion and the council members discuss the pros and cons. Be it the fraternity council or the dormitory council or the Campus Affairs Committee, these organizations offer students the opportunity to develop leadership abilities and maybe fight for what they believe to be right. Take away these student-managed organizations, and the college community would be wanting.

AN introduction to the Greeks! Each year about one-half of the students who go through rush accept bids. Maybe they are just curious to see what it's all about, and maybe they feel they can better develop good social, cultural and intellectual habits through such a system. Fraternities and sororities are constantly encouraging scholastic improvement among their members.

MOST extra-curricular activities are student-planned and executed, with the exception of varsity athletic events. This draws the students together in addition to giving them a release from studying.

Outstanding Personalities Visit Campus

OU STUDENTS were given a unique tri-angled view of national and foreign affairs during the week-end of November 14-15 when three outstanding speakers presented separate views on events making today's headlines.

Dr. Ralph Bunche, undersecretary of the United Nations and a holder of the Nobel Peace Prize, headed the list of visitors to the campus.

Speaking at a student convocation, the number two man in the UN gave an objective report of the workings of international diplomacy, concluding that "the strongest force for peace that can possibly be forged is working toward a decent standard of living to all the world, so that human dignity can flourish."

Personalized views representing specific nationalistic attitudes were expressed by the other two guests, who appeared at separate events.

Dr. Vljako Begovic, a member of the Yugoslavian Parliament and a well known educator in that country, told student leaders of his country's political and economic philosophies. Speaking through an interpreter, he explained that his country has an entirely different concept of socialism from that of the Soviet Union.

The third campus speaker was Dr. W. E. Weagly, superintendent of Erie County Schools in Ohio. Dr. Weagly had returned to this country just one week before his OU visit, after touring the Soviet Union for a month.

The speaker was one of 63 U.S. educators who made an inspection trip to that country on behalf of the American Association of School Administrators. His conclusion: "The U.S.S.R. education system is based on the welfare of the state, without regard to individual freedom."

Both Dr. Bunche and Dr. Begovic were guests of OU President John C. Baker. Dr. Baker and Dr. Bunche have been friends since 1953 when they met on United Nations business in Geneva. Dr. Begovic was host to Dr. Baker during the latter's visit to Yugoslavia in 1955.

Dr. Weagly was at OU for a conference of the Ohio Association of County Supervisors, and spoke over campus Radio Station WOUB.

Summers Gives Talk

DR. HOLLIS Summers opened the Faculty Lecture Series for the current year on November 19. A former visiting McGuffey professor of creative writing, Dr. Summers is now a professor of English at Ohio University. Last year while at the University of Kentucky, he was recognized as distinguished professor of the College of Arts and Sciences.

Dr. Summers topic, "When is a Poem," drew from his wide background in the literary field. He has published many poems and recently a book of poetry entitled The Walks Near Athens. He has published three novels and is collaborating on a literature book with Dr. Edgar Whan of the English department.

Dr. Southwick in India

ON A FULBRIGHT grant until June, 1960, Dr. Charles H. Southwick, assistant professor of zoology, is making a study of India's short-tailed rhesus monkeys.

This research is a rather basic zoological survey in addition to its economic and medical significance. Many rhesus monkeys are brought to the United States for research.

Dr. Southwick is conducting most of his research at Aligarh University in Aligarh, India. In this primarily agricultural area, the rhesus monkey which is believed sacred is also a destroyer of crops.

Ohio College Enrollment Up

OHIO'S 1959 college enrollment shows an increase of four per cent over last year. A record total of 169,850 students includes 9085 in 22 branches of the state universities and 11,479 in graduate schools (a seven per cent increase:)

Perry Now In Nigeria

ANOTHER Ohio U. faculty member is part of the International Cooperation Administration's project for helping the eastern region of Nigeria.

Donald E. Perry, associate professor of industrial arts, left Athens with his wife and one daughter the end of October for a two-year assignment in Enugu, Nigeria.

Six Ohio University faculty members are in their second year with the ICA program in Western Nigeria. Mr. Perry will work out courses of study, organize refresher courses for the instructors, prepare instructional materials and advise on the purchase of new equipment for their handicraft centers.

13th Annual Contest

NINETY-ONE high school juniors and seniors participated in the 13th annual Ohio History, Government and Citizenship contest held on the campus November 13 and 14.

Top winner was Tim Lull from Fremont. Second place winner was Kathleen Geib from Sidney and third place was William Benham from Wilmington.

The students took the test at 4 p.m. on Friday and then attended a banquet. In the evening they made use of the campus facilities by ice skating and swimming and attending the MIA. Getting a complete taste of campus life, the students stayed overnight in the dormitories and then attended the Awards Assembly Saturday morning.

OU to Host Conference

SOME 3000 persons from more than 130 countries will come to Athens the end of this month for the 18th Ecumenical Student Conference on the Christian World Mission.

The conference was held at OU during the Christmas recess in 1955. This year the students will arrive on December 27 for a six-day conference.

Most of the delegates are American college students and foreign students studying in this country. They represent nearly every nation in the free world.

WINNING HOMECOMING FLOATS were chosen from 34 entries of the October 31 parade. Bryan Hall took first prize in the women's division with the shaggy dog and theme "Lick 'em Good." Men's first prize went to Phi Kappa Tau, for the friendly skunk and theme "We Smell Victory." Tiffin Hall won the house decorating contest. Alumni attended a Centennial luncheon in the ice rink (bottom photo) before the game. (More luncheon photos in "Alumni Scope".)

EDWIN L. ROE, Zanesville teacher who has been associated with the branch program since it began in 1945, supervises a laboratory session in chemistry.

Science Keeps Pace

THE EXPANSION of science programs in Ohio University branch colleges is keeping pace with national education trends, a recent inspection revealed.

Dr. Jesse Day, Chairman of the Ohio U. Department of Chemistry, and Dr. Carl A. Frey, chairman of the Department of Biology, made the report after checking curricula and equipment at the branches last month.

The two men said that scientific equipment in the six branches is on a par with that found in most small colleges, and that the teaching programs easily meet the standards of quality higher education.

Last year alone more than $15,000 was spent on equipment placed in the labs at Chillicothe, Lancaster, Zanesville, Portsmouth, Martins Ferry and Ironton. All of the equipment was paid for with branch funds, in the self-supporting operation.

Although it is owned by the branches, much of the equipment is used by the high schools in which branch classes are held.

In some of the schools the branches have financed the repair of equipment and the installation of lighting improvements.

Both Dr. Day and Dr. Frey reported favorably on the quality of instruction in science courses. The instructors include faculty from OU and other colleges, high school teachers who are qualified to teach at the college level, and some top men in industry.

In the latter group are such men as a top research chemist with the Meade Corporation who teaches at Chillicothe branch, and an experienced engineer who teaches at the Ironton branch.

Lockbourne Program Expands

An education program being conducted at Lockbourne Air Force Base in Columbus has caught on so well that plans are underway to double its scope next semester.

Charles Mohler, educational director for the base came to the campus in November to plan the expansion. Courses will be increased from seven to 12 and the enrollment of 150 is expected to almost double. Courses for wives of the Air Force men may also be offered.

The Lockbourne program is carried out through the Lancaster branch college.

Bill Equalizes Fees

Many students at Ohio University branch colleges will receive refunds from registration fees paid this semester, thanks to a bill that has been passed by the State Legislature.

The Pepple Bill, introduced by Senator Ross Pepple of Lima and passed at the last legislative session, has set aside appropriations to equalize fees paid at branches with those paid on the main campus.

The bill will apply to 22 branches operated by the five state universities.

In the OU branches, the equalization will bring refunds to 644 students now enrolled for full-time (more than 12 credit hours) schedules. Those taking fewer hours of work already pay fees identical to part-time students on the campus.

Here is the way the program works: A branch student taking, say, 15 hours with two labs would have paid $12 per semester hour plus $10 for each lab, or a total of $200 for the semester. He therefore becomes eligible for a $65 refund—the difference between his payments and the $135 comprehensive fee on campus.

Beginning next semester, full-time branch students will simply pay the $135 registration fee.

In-Plant Program Planned

A new in-plant graduate education program, operated through the Zanesville branch college, is scheduled to open in February at Line Materials in that city.

Graduate work in engineering and mathematics will be offered to engineers working in the plant. A similar program is being carried out now at the Goodyear Atomic Energy Plant near Waverly.

Maine Studies OU Branches

The story of Ohio University's branch program was carried to the state of Maine in Mid-November when Dean Albert C. Gubitz made a trip there to confer with officials of the University of Maine.

At the request of the University's president, Dr. Lloyd H. Elliott, Dean Gubitz flew to Portland on November 16, where he spoke to faculty members of an off-campus institute. He also addressed interested citizens at a special meeting before going on to the U. M. campus at Orono.

At Orono he spoke to faculty members and to members of the board of trustees in separate meetings before returning November 19 to Athens.

Although the University of Maine operates an off-campus program in Portland, the idea of a full branch schedule is new to the state. Questions asked by University officials were concerned with students, faculty and general operation of the OU branches.

Bobcat Roundup

By Rowland Congdon, '49

THE BEST Ohio University football season in 21 years and highest Mid-American Conference finish in six years is the result of Bill Hess's second year at the helm.

The Bobcats' 7-2 record is the best by an OU team since the 1938 squad finished with the same mark. And their 4-2 record in the league placed them in second spot, highest since Carroll Widdoes' 1953 team copped the school's only conference championship with a 5-0-1 reading.

Even though Bobcat followers were disappointed that the team was unable to down Bowling Green in the final game, no one was drastically asking for the coach's scalp. Far from it.

Hess and his team were the talk of the town for their magnificent showing against the eventual league champions. As Hess explained to Green and White Club boosters in a meeting the week before the game with Bowling Green, "we have the satisfaction of at least playing for a share of the championship."

MOST VALUABLE PLAYER of 1959, Dick Green displays trophies awarded him at the Bobcat football banquet. The 225-pound junior center from Akron also was elected 1960 co-captain, along with Joe Dean, junior guard from Archbald, Pa. The large trophy in the center is the MVP award, and the pen set is for being chosen "Bobcat of the Week" in the Miami and Bowling Green games. The plaques represent "Lineman of the Week" awards for the Kent, Youngstown, Miami and Western Michigan games.

This occurred in a season tabbed at the start as another in Hess's series of rebuilding years, and one in which the Bobcats were not foreseen as a title contender.

The Bobcats actually forced the issue against the highly-favored Falcons, rated the No. 1 small college team in the nation as the game unfolded. OU was ninth.

By game-time it was a beautiful, sunny day, with the temperature in the mid-50's and the third largest crowd in Ohio Stadium history on hand to observe the Dad's Day festivities.

The first quarter was scoreless as each team attempted to find a weakness in its opponent.

Early in the second quarter, OU broke the scoreless tie on George Belu's 36-yard field goal. This had a moment of dramatic impact as the ball hit the center of the crossbar, and then toppled over for the three points.

On the second play after the kickoff, Bob Brooks recovered a Bowling Green fumble on the BG 23. Five plays later the Bobcats scored, making it 9-0 in their favor at the end of the half. Just before the intermission, BG had driven deep into OU territory but were unsuccessful on a field goal attempt of their own.

After receiving the second half kickoff, the visitors drove to the OU one-yard line, before being stopped on downs at that point.

The Bobcats started upfield with most of their followers feeling that the clincher had been applied with their terrific goal-line stand.

An OU fumble was recovered by BG on the Bobcats' 23, however, giving the Falcons another chance.

This they took in, but not before being forced into a fourth down and three situation on the three-yard line. A three-yard pass play gave them the score and they kicked the extra point, making it 9-7.

On the second play of the fourth quarter, Guard Jerry Colaner intercepted OU Quarterback Bob Wisniewski's pass and raced 50 yards untouched with the eventual winning score—13-9.

All comment around the campus and town was that "we have nothing to be ashamed of." Many long-time Bobcat fans mentioned it as being the "best football game I have ever seen." OU was 14-point underdog entering the contest.

Even though they had lost previously to arch-rival Miami, the Bobcats salvaged undisputed second place out of the season as the Redskins lost to Bowling Green and Kent State and played one less game than the Bobcats, for third place, their lowest finish ever in the conference.

OU came out of the Oxford clash, however, with numerous injuries. These had a definite bearing on the margin of victory over the next two conference opponents, Western Michigan, in the Homecoming game, and Marshall. The Broncos were finally beaten, 12-9, and the Huntington, W.Va., team, 21-14. Both of these games the Bobcats knew they had to win in order to make the Bowling Green clash a title affair.

A 22-15 win over Louisville in the Kentucky city further prepared the Bobcats for their important season-ending clash. In this, the Bobcats made few mistakes and outplayed the Kentuckians all the way, on a cold, blustery day.

Fullback Bob Brooks emerged as the leading ground-gainer for the second successive year. This time, he surged to 817 yards, exactly 100 more than his sophomore season.

Bobcat and Lineman of the Week awards for the final five games went to the following:

Miami—Dick Greeni, both awards; Western Michigan—Bob Harrison, Bobcat; Dick Greeni, lineman; Marshall—Jim Foley, Bobcat; Ken Fisher, lineman; Louisville—Bob Brooks, Bobcat; Joe Dean, lineman.

For the Bowling Green game, the coaches considered four linemen so outstanding that they gave these awards—Lineman of the Week to both Joe Dean and George Belu, and Bobcat of the Week to Dick Greeni and Joe Trevis.

Four seniors were on the varsity this season. Tackles Joe Trevis and Paul Erdy, Quarterback Bob Wisniewski, and End Henry Scott.

Soccer

THE OU SOCCER team also had a chance for the championship in its league, the Ohio Soccer League, but finished one-half game behind the winner, Akron. The cross country boys finished fourth in the Mid-American Conference.

Frosh Football

THE FRESHMAN footballers ended their season on a rather discouraging note, after winning the first three games over Miami, West Virginia and Marshall. They lost the next two, to Dayton and Xavier, but it was felt they could provide much needed depth to next year's varsity.

Upbuilding the Library

By Walter W. Wright

LIBRARIAN

OHIO UNIVERSITY Library of course receives its chief support from state appropriations and from "rotary" fees. The latter come largely from students. This year's budget for equipment, books, periodicals, and binding is $61,500 plus a balance of $11,255 in a special rotary account to support research programs.

Even these very sizable allocations do not enable the library to buy all that it needs. Were that so, it would be evidence of mental atrophy on the part of both faculty and library staff. On the other hand, were all our problems to be solved at one fell swoop we should be at a complete loss; and who wants to be a complete loss?

A comparison between 1957-58 and 1958-59 will show why we never run out of problems. In this one year the cost of current periodical subscriptions rose from $12,894 to $14,271 for virtually the same list of titles. In the same year also, almost 100 new titles were suggested, but of these we could place subscriptions for only six.

Quite clearly with every dollar of state appropriation stretched further than it can go, thus threatening to violate all the laws of finance, there is little leeway for the extra purchase, the kind of thing that should be bought only from private funds. Here is where the Ohio University Fund comes in.

Some Special Items

Occasionally special items come to our attention, such as the early nineteenth century volume with a decorative tooled binding and a fore-edge painting. A fore-edge painting is one done on the outer edges of a book's leaves. It is then concealed by the gilt and revealed only when the pages are so fanned or shingled as to expose each one minutely. Such an item is both unique and interesting, and it is used in library science instruction to develop an appreciation of fine craftsmanship in the production of books.

Other desirable items which we have not acquired but for which the Fund could logically be used are the Konrad Haebler incunabula portfolios, both German and Italian, which contain 110 plates each in limited editions, at $225. Owing to a lack of examples of early printing, teaching in the history of books and printing is difficult.

Such items would enable us to show the students actual copies of early great works. No facsimile is quite the same. Retorted A. E. Newton, the Philadelphia bibliophile, to someone who professed that a facsimile copy of a book would serve as well as an original: "Would you prefer to kiss a girl through a piece of plate glass?"

Fund Buys Microfilms

Even so, microfilm and other forms of micro-reproduction have their places in a university library. The great file of the New York Times, from its beginning in 1851 down to the date at which our microfilm subscription begins in 1941, cost over $6,000.

Had there been money enough in the O.U. Fund's library account, we should have long ago drawn upon it for the Times. It would have been to some extent an economical move too, for the film consumes only 2% of the storage space of the originals and we could then have junked the old disintegrating wood pulp volumes which we do have in paper form from 1925 to 1940 and which fill a small room in the stack, tier on tier, like leaning towers.

Someone once asked a scholar librarian, who had just finished praising the printed book as a form superior to the manuscript, why he was so sure that the microfilm would not supplant the printed book as the latter had supplanted the manuscript.

Replied he, "I can't picture myself curling up before the fire with a bottle of Scotch and a roll of microfilm." But we can't picture a student or scholar curling up with a bound volume of the Times either.

Unencumbered Money

Sometimes a special collection becomes available to us, such as the classics library of the late Professor Victor D. Hill. Again the Fund comes into the picture to enable us to make a purchase over and above our usual expenditures, and thus greatly to strengthen our holdings in unexpected directions. Any library needs a certain amount of unencumbered money which it can use without warning.

Dormitory libraries vary from the tastefully appointed library in Voigt Hall to an encyclopedia in the lounge of the Center Dorm. For several years we have used contributions from the Mothers Club of Greater Dayton and from the friends of Earl Cranston Shively to buy reference books for the dormitories.

In the course of time, all dormitories should share, but we have far to go before all residents can become inevitably conscious of books as a part of their daily living in the dorms.

Whether it be for rarities for instruction, research resources for graduate study, or reference books for dormitory residents, alumni and friends of the University can, through the O.U. Fund, contribute to the continued upbuilding of the OU Library.

Former OU President James Dies in Florida

DR. HERMAN G. JAMES, president of Ohio University from 1935 to 1943, died Thursday, November 26, at his home in St. Petersburg, Fla.

Ohio University's 12th president, Dr. James later taught marketing research at DePaul University in Chicago, until his retirement in 1951. He was 72 at the time of his death.

Learning of his death, Ohio U. President John C. Baker said, "Dr. James made many contributions to Ohio University and his work will endure for a long time."

President Baker pointed specifically to the University College, in which all freshmen are enrolled. "Today, this is being widely recognized for its importance to incoming students and to the University," he said.

Dr. James came to Ohio University from the University of South Dakota, after a one-year search for a successor to the late Dr. E. B. Bryan. He had been president of the South Dakota school since 1929.

A native of Philadelphia, he held the bachelor of arts degree from the University of Illinois, a doctor of jurisprudence from the University of Chicago, and a doctor of philosophy from Columbia.

He had served 13 years on the faculty of the University of Texas, followed by four years as a dean at the University of Nebraska, before going to South Dakota.

In 1941 President James was requested by the State Department to go to Sao Paulo, Brazil, to aid in the promotion of cultural relations between the two countries. He was granted a leave of absence the following year.

On the trip to South America, however, he became ill. He returned to the United States and entered a hospital in Washington, for several weeks.

Dr. James then resigned his position as president of Ohio U. effective June 30, 1943, and was succeeded by Dr. Walter S. Gamertsfelder, who had been acting president during the leave of absence.

Dr. James was the son of Dr. Edmund J. James, one-time president of the University of Illinois. Many of his early years were spent in Germany.

He became interested in South American affairs in 1910, when he was private secretary with the Pan-American Conference in Buenos Aires.

Dr. James wrote three books dealing with Latin American affairs, and several other books on municipal government and administration.

He is survived by his wife, Genevieve Kuby James, two daughters and a son.

Former Hobby Now Full-time Job

After spending many years with art as a hobby, Pearl Dee Friedman Church adopted it as a full time profession of few years ago. Prior to this decision to take up art full time, Mrs. Church worked in vocational counseling and neuropsychiatric work.

Her style is generally known as abstract expressionism. She writes that she is constantly seeking new methods of expression and that art for her is a constant discovery. Each painting is another step into the future derived from experiences.

Mrs. Church has had several one-man shows, many group shows and has work represented in galleries in Washington, D. C., Massachusetts, California and Nevada. There are private collections in Boston, Dallas, Miami, New York City, Portland, Seattle, Mexico City, Madrid and other places.

Although home for Dr. Donald E. Church and Mrs. Church is in Alexan-

Nutrition Expert Finds Satisfaction In Her Work

THIRTY-FIVE years in the food business would become quite routine for most women. However, for Olive Kincard Tully it has been an interesting period with much satisfaction.

Mrs. James F. Tully, who was born and raised in Southeastern Ohio, came to Ohio U. in 1920. During her college career she had dual interests—home economics and athletics. During her spare time, Olive was participating in various sports.

However, home economics captured the major part of Olive's time and following graduation she taught home ec. and sociology in the high school at Bremen, Ohio. The following year she took another teaching job, this time in Crooksville (where she attended high school.)

While at her alma mater, Olive was also dean of girls. She saved money from her teaching salary and took a trip to Europe during one of the summer vacations.

In 1929 she turned to the dietetics field and began an internship at Johns Hopkins Hospital School. After receiving the diploma, she went to St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Dayton where she was one of the organizers of the Dayton Dietetics Association.

Olive Tully, '24

After a year in Dayton, Olive went to New York to be first assistant dietitian at the Long Island College Hospital in Brooklyn. She was also on the faculty of the nursing school, teaching nutrition and dietherapy. Later she became head dietitian at this hospital.

In 1935 Olive assisted in opening the new Queens General Hospital, which is one of 26 City Hospitals in New York City. At the Queens Hospital she met and married her husband, James Tully, a Brooklyn man. As she reports it, "From then on I had good opportunities to use my B.S. in home economics in my dual career as homemaker and dietitian."

In the past 29 years Mrs. Tully has been connected with Queens Hospital, she has directed and supervised the training of dietitians and maintained an educational training program for other dietary personnel. All this in addition to managing the food service for a 759 bed hospital. She also managed to do part-time graduate study at Teachers College and Columbia University and Cornell University.

This nutrition expert was recently appointed chairman of the membership committee of the Greater New York Dietetics Association and will serve on the Executive Board of the Association for the next two years. Appointed to membership in the Food and Nutrition Council of Greater New York, Olive has been invited to become chairman elect of the 11th annual city-wide Nutrition Week program for 1960.

An example of the satisfaction one can get from dietetics work can be found in the 1957 Community Project Mrs. Tully carried out. The Queens General Hospital sent out a holiday S. O. S. for volunteers to design menu covers to make the Easter season a little bit happier for bed-ridden patients. The response was so great that the hospital now has thousands of beautiful menu covers and favors for all the holidays.

Mrs. Tully states that in addition to the satisfaction of making life more pleasant for the patients, there is an immense amount of satisfaction in training dietitians. "Seeing them develop and grow as they acquire the knowledge and experience necessary to make them a success as a dietitian, and sponsoring them into membership of the American Dietetics Association," are worthwhile contribution to her profession.

Van Meter In Mass.

Dale Van Meter, '44

Life for Dale L. Van Meter has been one of helping other people. The young man, who as an undergraduate was active in extra-curricular activities, is now the clergyman in the Episcopal Church in Westboro, Massachusetts.

The native of Racine, Ohio studied at the Boston School of Theology and also at the Episcopal Theological School in Cambridge, Mass. In June of 1952 he was ordained a priest in the Episcopal Church. He has served several churches in Massachusetts and is now in Westboro, Mass. at St. Stephen's Church.

Since Dale has been at St. Stephen's, a church building and parish hall have been constructed. This church building was chosen as one of eight to be included in "The Clerical Directory" for 1959.

Before entering the theological field, Dale Van Meter taught at Lafayette College in Easton, Pennsylvania.

In addition to his duties to the St. Stephen's parish, Dale is on the Massachusetts Council of Churches and is chairman of the Department of Christian Social Relations of the Diocese of Western Massachusetts of the Protestant Episcopal Church. He is active in work at Lyman School, which is a correctional institution for delinquent boys.

Dale is a member of the Association of Mental Hospital Chaplains and works with the Westboro State Hospital, a mental hospital of the Commonwealth.

Letter

To the Editor . . .

Having finished carefully reading the historical article in June issue on our Alumni Association, I wish to congratulate its authors on an excellent job well done. It is only to be expected that some small errors might creep in and, since this is a historical document for posterity, I wish to call your attention to two small errors of small consequence but pertinent to the facts:

1. On page 30, first paragraph under heading "First OU Alumni Chapter", the name "Cabin" B. Humphrey appears. This was no doubt intended to be Calvin Humphrey. I knew well his younger brother and their family home was on Hocking River a little below Coolville, my home town.
2. On page 32, in section "The Alumni Gateway", the poem quoted under statement "And Mr. William C. Ewing wrote for the occasion:

"Oh, the East may sing the praises of Old Eli Yale, Johnny Harvard, too;
Roger Williams in a fit of despair
Founded Old Brown U.
Princeton came by way of Nassau.
So did Dartmouth, too;
But Ohio's up and doing
When old father Thomas Ewing
Gave three cheers for Old OU.

I can assure you that, if we wrote it for that occasion, he only quoted it from memory because it constituted the words to a popular student song used at least a number of years before that. During my student years, and particularly 1911 thru 1914 when I was actively interested in athletic events, this song was frequently sung at rallies preceding important football games. There is also an error in the last line as printed. This should read:

"Gave three cheers then for Old OU".
The extra word was needed to suit the music rhythm.

Again may I say I appreciate the excellent article and will keep it in my personal archives.

Sincerely yours,
Chas. T. Pugh '15

LOIS P. BLAYNEY, '15, and her husband, Walter W. Blayney, of McArthur have passed away. She died July 11, 1956 and he died Oct. 30, 1958.

H. C. (SPIKE) DECKARD, '09, died Friday, May 15 after a long illness. He is remembered in Bowling Green as the finest athlete the town ever produced. While at Ohio U. he started as fullback. When Ford's Motor Co. was in its infancy, Mr. Deckard assisted in the design and construction of all special machines used to produce the Model-T-leading to Ford's assembly line process. He is survived by his wife, Berenice, in Fort Worth, Texas.

GEORGE RIFE, husband of CHLOE ANDREWS RIFE, '21, died Oct. 16 in the Nelsonville hospital.

WILLIAM B. ROBBINS, '51, died August 23 in Stouder Memorial Hospital after an extended illness. He had studied at Asbury Theological Seminary and did graduate work at Drew University in Madison, N.J. He became an ordained Methodist minister and was assistant pastor in the Church of All Nations in New York City.

BYRON J. FISCHER, '27, widely known educator in the Licking County schools and a former superintendent of schools at Alexandria, Union Station and Homer, died Sept. 26 in Doctors Hospital in Columbus. He retired in 1954 after 42 years in the education field. Following retirement he did substitute work for Newark High School. He is survived by his widow, a daughter and two grandchildren.

ADELE BIRD, who attended Ohio U. from 1931 to 1932, while her husband was director of athletics, died Sept. 28 in Athens. Her husband died in 1948 and she is survived by a daughter in California and a son in Missouri.

FRANCIS R. PLATTS, husband of Amy G. Barnhill, '25, died Sept. 29 in a Youngstown hospital. He had retired two weeks prior to his death after 26 years with the General Fireproofing Company.

CHARLES W. TOPPER, '54, died Oct. 1 when his Air Force B57 jet bomber exploded and crashed shortly after take-off from Stewart Air Force Base near Newburgh, N.Y. Bystanders said the plane had dragged its wing on take-off causing sparks. The plane exploded about a mile and a half from the air base. The 27-year-old Ashtabula man is survived by his wife, Marie Lewis, '53.

HUGH W. PARKS, '12, died July 20. He had cancer. He had retired from teaching in 1953 and was living in Portland, Ore.

Deaths

Word had been received at the Alumni Office of the death of ELLA WESTHAFFER KELLY, '12, on July 15.

MARY MARJORIE SHOMO RICHARD, '43, an elementary school teacher in Virginia died of leukemia on September 4. She taught at Centerville before moving to Virginia. She is survived by her husband, two daughters, a son and her parents at Stevensville, Va.

GILBERT M. MCCONNELL, '15, died Sept. 29 in Bethesda Hospital from a heart attack. He had been with The Mosaic Tile Co. for 36 years, and was plant manager at the time of his death. He was with Westinghouse Electric before going to Zanesville with the tile company. He was a longtime director of the Zanesville Chamber of Commerce and served on the board of trustees of Bethesda Hospital, the Zanesville Art Institute and the YMCA. He is survived by his widow, a son, Dr. John W. McConnell of Cincinnati, a daughter, Mrs. A. E. Hull 111 of Glenview, Ill. and three grandchildren.
